19 MEMORANDUM OPINION

20 WRAY, Judge.

21 {1} Defendant Redwolf Pope was convicted by a jury for one count of third-22 degree criminal sexual penetration (CSP), contrary to NMSA 1978, Section 30-9-23 11(A), (F) (2009), and one count of voyeurism, contrary to NMSA 1978, Section 24 30-9-20(A) (2007). Defendant appeals, and we affirm.

1 {2} We develop the facts as they become necessary to our analysis.

2 DISCUSSION

3 {3} On appeal, Defendant raises three issues: (1) the district court’s denial of his 4 motion to change venue was an abuse of discretion; (2) the evidence failed to support 5 his two convictions; and (3) his convictions violate double jeopardy protections. We 6 begin with the change of venue ruling.

7 I. Any Error by the District Court in Denying the Change of Venue Motion
8 Is Moot

9 {4} More than two years before trial, an article was published in a local newspaper 10 providing details of the allegations against Defendant at issue in this case, as well as 11 accusations regarding additional women. The day before trial, another article was 12 published that described the allegations and the anticipated evidence, and included 13 information about plea negotiations that the State had included in public pleadings.
14 Defendant filed a motion to change venue, which the district court denied. On 15 appeal, Defendant argues that under NMSA 1978, Section 38-3-3(B) (2003), “[a] 16 change of venue was mandatory, and that, therefore, the failure to grant the motion 17 was an abuse of discretion.” Although we agree that a change of venue is mandatory 18 absent a hearing, see State v. Astorga, 2015-NMSC-007, ¶ 68, 343 P.3d 1245, we 19 disagree that reversal is required under the circumstances.

20 {5} Under Section 38-3-3(B), “[i]n a case in which there have been no preceding 21 changes of venue, this right to a venue change is generally mandatory and must be

1 granted by the trial court, provided that the moving party has filed an affidavit as 2 prescribed by” the statute. State v. House, 1999-NMSC-014, ¶ 29, 127 N.M. 151, 3 978 P.2d 967;¹ State v. Shawan, 1967-NMSC-013, ¶ 6, 77 N.M. 354, 423 P.2d 39 4 (concluding “that the denial of the appellant’s motion for a change of venue, without 5 a hearing, supported by the exhibit attached thereto, was an abuse of discretion 6 requiring a reversal”); State v. Montoya, 1968-NMCA-069, ¶ 26, 80 N.M. 64, 451
7 P.2d 557 (acknowledging that “if the court had not required evidence, [the] appellant 8 would have been entitled to a change of venue as a matter of law”). Defendant argues 9 that the district court (1) was required to grant the motion for a change of venue 10 because this was his first such motion, and he filed the required affidavit; and (2) 11 improperly denied the motion despite the State’s failure to contest the evidence 12 submitted by Defendant’s affidavit. As we have noted, when venue has not been 13 previously changed and the motion is accompanied by the required affidavits, the 14 district court may grant the motion or require an evidentiary hearing, see House, 15 1999-NMSC-014, ¶ 29 (explaining that a change in venue is “generally mandatory” 16 in cases with no prior change of venue and “provided that the moving party has filed 17 an affidavit as prescribed by” Section 38-3-3(B), but that the court may also require 18 an evidentiary hearing), or defer ruling until after voir dire, see State v. Gutierrez, ¹*House* refers to Section 38-3-3(A)(2), see 1999-NMSC-014, ¶ 29, but the statute was amended in 2003, and we therefore refer to the current version, Section 38-3-3(B).

1 2011-NMSC-024, ¶ 47, 150 N.M. 232, 258 P.3d 1024. The district court, however, 2 did not defer ruling and denied the motion without reference to an evidentiary 3 hearing.

4 {6} Nevertheless, we need not determine whether the district court’s denial of the 5 motion to change venue is reversible error. The district court’s ruling on the issue 6 was rendered moot by the seating of an unbiased jury. See State v. Romero, 2019-
7 NMSC-007, ¶ 17, 435 P.3d 1231. In Romero, the district court granted the motion 8 to change venue but selected a venue different than those requested in the 9 defendant’s motion. See id. ¶ 7. After voir dire, the defendant renewed the motion to 10 change venue, and the district court again denied the motion. See id. ¶ 8. On appeal, 11 the defendant argued that the district incorrectly decided the initial motion to change 12 venue. Id. ¶ 9. The Romero Court concluded that it

13 need not decide the merit of the [district] court’s initial decision to 14 move the venue to [a county other than the one the defendant 15 requested]. As we have discussed, an unbiased jury was actually 16 selected and seated, rendering this issue moot. Actual prejudice, not 17 presumed prejudice, is the standard by which we review the [district] 18 court’s decision in this case. The parties and the [district] court made 19 sufficient inquiry during voir dire into the actual prejudice of the jurors.
20 The jurors selected did not exhibit actual prejudice. The [district] court 21 acted within its discretion to deny the renewed motion to change venue.
22 [The d]efendant’s argument therefore fails.

23 Id. ¶ 17 (citation omitted). Unlike the present case, Romero did not involve a motion 24 to change venue that was denied without a hearing. See id. ¶ 7. Both proceedings, 25 however, resulted in the seating of an unbiased jury. See id. ¶ 14. Defendant makes

1 no contention that the jury seated in his case was biased, and our review of the record
2 reveals no bias. To the extent Defendant argues that because the change in venue 3 was mandatory, this Court should not consider prejudice at all, we disagree. In this 4 case, Defendant had the benefit of an unbiased jury. Our review of the record 5 confirms that the district court excused for cause three jurors who had been exposed 6 to the pretrial media about which Defendant was concerned. Two additional jurors—7 who had been exposed to the media, but who had expressed that they could be fair—8 were also excused from the jury. We therefore conclude that the seating of an 9 unbiased jury under the circumstances of this case rendered Defendant’s challenge 10 to the district court’s denial of the motion moot because “the jurors selected did not 11 exhibit actual prejudice.” See id.

12 II. The Evidence Supported Defendant’s Convictions

13 {7} Defendant next maintains that sufficient evidence supported neither of the 14 convictions and both relied on speculation and conjecture. We review the sufficiency 15 of the evidence “in the light most favorable to the prosecution” and consider whether 16 “any rational trier of fact could have found the essential elements of the crime 17 beyond a reasonable doubt.” State v. Moreno-Ortiz, 2022-NMCA-059, ¶ 10, 517 18 P.3d 959 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted), cert. denied (No. S-1-SC-19 39499). “The jury instructions become the law of the case against which the 20 sufficiency of the evidence is to be measured.” Id. (internal quotation marks and

1 citation omitted). We therefore turn to the elements set forth in the instructions 2 received by the jury, beginning with the CSP charge.

3 {8} The jury was instructed as follows on CSP:

4 For you to find [D]efendant guilty of [CSP] as charged in Count 2, the 5 [S]tate must prove to your satisfaction beyond a reasonable doubt each 6 of the following elements of the crime:

- 7 1. [D]efendant caused [Victim] to engage in sexual intercourse;
- 8 2. [Victim] was unconscious, asleep, or physically helpless;
- 9 3. [D]efendant knew or had reason to know of the condition of 10 [Victim;]
- 11 4. [D]efendant's act was unlawful;
- 12 5. This happened in New Mexico on or about the 20[th] day of 13 August 2017.

14 See UJI 14-943 NMRA. Defendant challenges the evidence supporting elements one 15 and two because a video clip played for the jury did not show the face of the male 16 person, and Defendant was linked to the video only by the red ribbons the person in 17 the video wore in their hair and by Victim's testimony that she was with Defendant 18 when Victim blacked out. Having reviewed the evidence presented at trial in the 19 light most favorable to the verdict, we conclude that the evidence was sufficient to 20 support the verdict. Moreno-Ortiz, 2022-NMCA-059, ¶ 10.

21 {9} The video clip played for the jury showed a male with red ribbons in his hair 22 having sexual intercourse with a female, identified as Victim. An acquaintance of 1 Defendant's (Witness) testified that she saw the video on an iPad that was located in 2 the apartment where Defendant stayed. Witness accessed the contents of the iPad

3 after retrieving the password for the iPad from Defendant. Witness identified 4 Defendant as the male in the images she saw on the iPad. Victim testified that 5 Defendant wore red ribbons in his hair on the night in question, the next morning, 6 and every other time Victim had seen him. Regarding the night in question, Victim 7 testified that Defendant offered to give her a ride to a friend's home, she got into the 8 car with Defendant, he gave her an open drink, Victim took a sip, and the next thing 9 Victim remembered was waking up in a hotel room with Defendant in the room with 10 her. Victim additionally testified that in a lengthy text message nearly a year after 11 the incident, Defendant admitted to having sex with her and taking pictures of her 12 that night, but Defendant claimed that Victim consented. From this evidence a 13 rational juror could have concluded that Defendant had sexual intercourse with 14 Victim and that she was "unconscious, asleep, [or] physically or mentally helpless"
15 during the encounter. See UJI 14-943; Moreno-Ortiz, 2022-NMCA-059, ¶ 15 16 (concluding that whether a victim is "unconscious, asleep or physically helpless" 17 and whether that condition "was or should have been visible to [the d]efendant are 18 questions of fact for the jury to decide based on all the evidence" (internal quotation 19 marks omitted)).

1 {10} In relation to the voyeurism charge, the jury was instructed as follows:

2 For you to find [D]efendant guilty of Voyeurism as charged in Count 3, 3 the [S]tate must prove to your satisfaction beyond a reasonable doubt 4 each of the following elements of the crime:

5 1. [D]efendant used an instrumentality to view, photograph, 6 videotape, film, webcast or record the intimate areas of [Victim].

7 2. [Victim] did not know or consent to the recording of her intimate 8 parts.

9 3. While unconscious, incapacitated or asleep in the hotel room, 10 [Victim] had a reasonable expectation of privacy.

11 See § 30-9-20(A).² Defendant contends that this conviction was not supported 12 because the State failed to prove the second and third listed items. Defendant 13 maintains that neither the video, nor Victim’s “unbelievable testimony,” 14 demonstrated that Victim was “asleep, incapacitated, or unconscious or that she did 15 not consent to being filmed.” The jury viewed the video recording, as well as the ²We observe that Section 30-9-20(A) does not include the language in item three of the instruction given to the jury, that Victim was “unconscious, incapacitated or asleep.” The parties do not challenge the instruction on appeal, and we do not consider its correctness. In reviewing the sufficiency of the evidence, we consider whether the evidence supported the verdict as the jury was instructed. See State v. Dowling, 2011-NMSC-016, ¶ 18, 150 N.M. 110, 257 P.3d 930 (reviewing a sufficiency of the evidence claim “under the erroneous instruction provided to the jury at trial”). But see State v. Carpenter, 2016-NMCA-058, ¶ 14, 374 P.3d 744 (noting that reviewing courts consider “only the legal question whether, after viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, any rational trier of fact could have found the essential elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt” (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)).

1 photographs. Neither the video nor the photographs are in the record, but the 2 descriptive testimony at trial supports the jury’s verdict.

3 {11} As we have noted, Witness testified that the pictures and video were located 4 on an iPad found at Defendant’s apartment and were accessed using Defendant’s 5 password. Victim’s final memory before waking up in the hotel room in Defendant’s 6 presence was being in a car with Defendant. The investigating detective testified that 7 the video clip depicted a woman (Victim) who made no physical response during 8 sexual intercourse—no “facial expressions” or “movements of any kind.” Victim 9 identified herself in photographs in which she is shown with her clothes in disarray.
10 Victim stated that she was passed out and that she had no idea how she got into the 11 physical position she was shown to be in the photographs or how her clothes came 12 undone. Victim testified that she did not consent to Defendant removing her dress 13 or her nylons, or to Defendant positioning her as she appeared in the photographs.
14 From this, a reasonable juror could conclude that Defendant was guilty of 15 voyeurism. See § 30-9-20(A). Accordingly the evidence was sufficient to support 16 the verdict.

17 III. The Convictions Did Not Violate Double Jeopardy

18 {12} Defendant contends that his convictions for CSP and voyeurism violate the 19 protection against double jeopardy, because he maintains that he was punished under 20 multiple statutes for the same conduct. Our double jeopardy analysis first evaluates,

1 as a mixed question of law and fact, whether the conduct was unitary—“whether the 2 same conduct violates both statutes.” State v. Armijo, 2005-NMCA-010, ¶ 15, 136
3 N.M. 723, 104 P.3d 1114 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). In this 4 case, we assume but do not decide that the conduct was unitary, see State v. Bahney, 5 2012-NMCA-039, ¶ 21, 274 P.3d 134, and proceed directly to the second part of the 6 analysis, in which we ask a legal question, “whether the Legislature intended to 7 impose multiple punishments for the unitary conduct” in separate statutes. Id. ¶ 20 8 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Where the statutes in question do 9 not “clearly prescribe multiple punishments,” we look to “whether each provision 10 requires proof the other does not.” State v. Swick, 2012-NMSC-018, ¶¶ 11-12, 279
11 P.3d 747 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). If the statutes are vague 12 and unspecific and a strict comparison of the elements renders unreliable a 13 conclusion about legislative intent, our analysis of the proof required to establish the 14 elements of the crimes is informed by the State’s legal theory, including charging 15 documents, jury instructions, evidence at trial, and arguments to the jury. State v.
16 Begaye, ___-NMSC-___, ¶¶ 23-24, ___ P.3d ___ (S-1-SC-38797, Jan. 12, 2023) 17 (describing a “modified Blockburger” approach, named for Blockburger v. United 18 States, 284 U.S. 299 (1932)). As the voyeurism and CSP statutes do not clearly 19 prescribe multiple punishments, we turn to the language of the statutes.

1 {13} Voyeurism involves

2 using the unaided eye to view or intentionally using an instrumentality 3 to view, photograph, videotape, film, webcast or record the intimate 4 areas of another person without the knowledge and consent of that 5 person:

6 (1) while the person is in the interior of a bedroom, bathroom, 7 changing room, fitting room, dressing room or tanning booth or the 8 interior of any other area in which the person has a reasonable 9 expectation of privacy; or

10 (2) under circumstances where the person has a reasonable 11 expectation of privacy, whether in a public or private place.

12 Section 30-9-20(A). The CSP statute prohibits “the unlawful and intentional causing 13 of a person to engage in sexual intercourse” in a variety of manners “to any extent 14 and with any object,” and third-degree CSP punishes “all criminal sexual penetration 15 perpetrated through the use of force or coercion not otherwise specified in this 16 section.” Section 30-9-11(A), (F). These statutes are vague and unspecific because 17 they can be violated in multiple ways, and we must therefore continue our analysis 18 to evaluate the State’s theory of how the statutes were violated. See Begaye, ___- 19 NMSC-___, ¶ 24.

20 {14} Defendant maintains that the State blended the two crimes by arguing that 21 Defendant committed voyeurism by intentionally using a camera to record Victim’s 22 intimate areas while he was engaged in CSP and at trial repeatedly connected the 23 images to the CSP. Under the modified Blockburger analysis, we look to whether 24 each crime, under the State’s theory of the case, has an element that the other does

1 not. See State v. Serrato, 2021-NMCA-027, ¶ 16, 493 P.3d 383 (comparing the 2 elements not “in the abstract” but in the context of “the legal theory of the offense 3 that is charged” (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)), cited with approval
4 in Begaye, ___-NMSC-___, ¶¶ 31-32, 35. In this case, based on the charging 5 documents and jury instructions, the State’s theory of voyeurism required the State 6 to prove that Defendant intentionally used a device to record or photograph an 7 intimate area of Victim’s body. The State’s theory for the CSP charge required proof 8 of penetration, not exposing and recording Victim’s intimate parts. The video 9 evidence at trial further established that the offenses did not overlap. See Begaye, 10 ___-NMSC-___, ¶ 22 (describing the modified Blockburger test to consider whether 11 “the statute as applied by the [s]tate in a given case, overlaps with other criminal 12 statutes so that the accused is being punished twice for the same offense” (emphasis, 13 internal quotation marks, and citation omitted)).

14 {15} Two offenses completely overlap and violate double jeopardy when the state 15 “direct[s] the jury to the same act . . . as the basis to convict for both crimes.” Id.
16 ¶ 29 (emphasis added) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). In Begaye, 17 the state used evidence of the same act—that the defendant broke a window—to 18 establish both an unauthorized entry for the crime of burglary and the breaking of a 19 window and entry without permission elements of the crime of breaking and 20 entering. Id. ¶ 35. In the present case, the video evidence depicted the act of CSP—

1 as the State argued in closing, “the penetration” of Victim by “the person with the 2 red ribbons who admitted to having done it a year later.” The videos and other 3 images—as well as Defendant’s text message to Victim nearly a year later admitting 4 to recording and photographing Victim’s intimate areas—also established that 5 Defendant committed the act of using an instrumentality to view or record Victim’s 6 intimate areas, a criminal act independent of sexual penetration. Thus the State did 7 not rely upon the same conduct, under the same theory, to support both charges. Cf.
8 Serrato, 2021-NMCA-027, ¶¶ 19-20 (concluding by examining the state’s closing 9 argument that the state’s theory for two charges “was based upon the same conduct 10 and under the same theory” and violated double jeopardy). As a result, we conclude 11 that the Legislature intended to permit punishment for each of Defendant’s 12 convictions.

13 CONCLUSION

14 {16} For these reasons, we affirm.
