17 MEMORANDUM OPINION

18 DUFFY, Judge.

19 {1} Defendant Estevan Roybal appeals his convictions for negligent use of a 20 deadly weapon, contrary to NMSA 1978, Section 30-7-4(A)(4) (1993), and 21 aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, contrary to NMSA 1978, Section 30-3-22 2(A) (1963). Defendant argues that (1) the jury should have received instructions on 23 self-defense and duress, (2) there was insufficient evidence presented at trial to

1 support his convictions, and (3) the district court erred in failing to offer a curative 2 instruction or grant a mistrial in response to hearsay testimony introduced at trial.
3 We conclude that the evidence presented was sufficient to warrant a self-defense 4 instruction and reverse.

5 BACKGROUND

6 {2} Defendant's convictions arise from a confrontation with his then-girlfriend's
7 father. Defendant's then-girlfriend, R.P., had sent messages to her parents, Raymond 8 and Brenda P., which led them to believe R.P. and her children were in danger.
9 Because of these messages, Raymond and Brenda drove to Defendant and R.P.'s 10 home and parked their vehicle out of sight of the front door. When Raymond and 11 Brenda arrived, Defendant was outside by the front door with R.P. and two of their 12 children. Raymond retrieved a shotgun from the trunk of his vehicle and walked 13 toward the front of the home. Upon seeing Defendant, Raymond pointed the shotgun 14 at him and told him not to move or he would shoot. As Raymond pointed the gun at 15 Defendant, Brenda took the two children to their vehicle. R.P. followed them.
16 Raymond then backed away from Defendant and walked toward the vehicle, but 17 continued to point his shotgun at Defendant.

18 {3} After Raymond was out of sight, Defendant went inside the home, retrieved 19 his handgun, and loaded it. Defendant then looked through his kitchen window and 20 saw Raymond, who was by the vehicle. Defendant fired his handgun in the direction

1 of Raymond but hit the vehicle while Brenda, R.P., and two of Defendant's children
2 were inside of it. Defendant fired a second shot, hitting the ground near Raymond's 3 feet.

4 {4} There was conflicting testimony about whether Raymond had pointed the 5 shotgun at Defendant before Defendant fired at Raymond. Defendant testified that 6 Raymond pointed the shotgun at him again when the two saw each other through the 7 kitchen window. Raymond testified that he thought the incident was over and had 8 the shotgun pointed at the ground while he was opening the car door, but pointed the 9 shotgun back at Defendant after Defendant fired the first shot.

10 {5} Raymond and Brenda called 911, and Defendant was later arrested and 11 charged with two counts of child abuse, contrary to NMSA 1978, Section 30-6-12 1(D)(1) (2009), two counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, contrary to 13 Section 30-3-2(A), one count of shooting at a motor vehicle, contrary to NMSA
14 1978, Section 30-3-8(B) (1993), and one count of negligent use of a deadly weapon, 15 contrary to Section 30-7-4(A)(4). The jury ultimately convicted Defendant of 16 aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and negligent use of a deadly weapon, but 17 acquitted Defendant of the other charges. Defendant appeals.

18 DISCUSSION

19 {6} Defendant argues that the jury should have been given instructions on duress 20 and the use of deadly force in self-defense. See UJI 14-5130 NMRA (setting out the

1 instruction for the defense of duress in non-homicide cases); UJI 14-5183 NMRA 2 (setting out the instruction regarding use of deadly force in self-defense in non-3 homicide cases). Because Defendant requested both instructions at trial, we review
4 his claims for reversible error. See State v. Ellis, 2008-NMSC-032, ¶ 14, 144 N.M.
5 253, 186 P.3d 245.

6 {7} As to Defendant’s claim of error regarding the duress instruction, we observe 7 that Defendant requested this instruction as a defense to the two child abuse charges, 8 and the jury ultimately acquitted Defendant on both counts of child abuse. Because 9 Defendant cannot be retried on these counts, there is no need for this Court to review
10 this claim for reversible error. See State v. Melton, 1984-NMCA-115, ¶ 14, 102 N.M.
11 120, 692 P.2d 45 (noting that claims of instructional error need not be addressed and 12 no prejudice occurred when the claimed error related to a charge upon which the 13 jury acquitted).

14 {8} Defendant also argues that the district court erred in declining his request for 15 an instruction on self-defense. “A defendant is not entitled to a self-defense 16 instruction unless it is justified by sufficient evidence on every element of self-17 defense.” State v. Rudolfo, 2008-NMSC-036, ¶ 17, 144 N.M. 305, 187 P.3d 170. The 18 requirements for self-defense are: (1) an appearance of immediate danger of death
19 or great bodily harm to the defendant; (2) the defendant was in fact put in such fear 20 and committed a particular act because of that fear; and (3) a reasonable person

1 would have reacted in the same manner. See State v. Guerra, 2012-NMSC-014, ¶ 13,
2 278 P.3d 1031; see also State v. Martinez, 1981-NMSC-016, ¶ 4, 95 N.M. 421, 622
3 P.2d 1041; State v. Lara, 1989-NMCA-098, ¶ 7, 109 N.M. 294, 784 P.2d 1037; UJI
4 14-5183, overruled on other grounds by State v. Tollardo, 2012-NMSC-008, ¶ 37
5 n.6, 275 P.3d 110. “The first two requirements, the appearance of immediate danger 6 and actual fear, are subjective in that they focus on the perception of the defendant
7 at the time of the incident. By contrast, the third requirement is objective in that it 8 focuses on the hypothetical behavior of a reasonable person acting under the same
9 circumstances as the defendant.” Rudolfo, 2008-NMSC-036, ¶ 17 (internal quotation 10 marks and citation omitted). We review the evidence in the light most favorable to 11 the giving of the self-defense instruction. See State v. Duarte, 1996-NMCA-038, ¶ 5, 12 121 N.M. 553, 915 P.2d 309.

13 {9} Defendant maintains that his trial testimony provided sufficient evidence to 14 support giving a self-defense instruction. The State does not dispute that the 15 evidence was sufficient to support the two subjective elements of self-defense and 16 focuses its argument on the third, objective element, contending that Defendant did 17 not act as a reasonable person would act under the circumstances. The State 18 maintains that the objective element was not satisfied because (1) the force used was 19 unreasonable in relation to the threat in light of the fact that Raymond never fired on

1 Defendant, (2) Defendant could have moved from the window to protect himself,
2 and (3) Raymond was attempting to withdraw from the conflict.

3 {10} We reject the State’s first two arguments because, viewing the evidence in the 4 light most favorable to the giving of the requested instruction, there was enough 5 evidence to raise a reasonable doubt in the mind of a juror about whether 6 Defendant’s actions constituted an objectively reasonable act of self-defense.
7 Defendant testified that when Raymond approached him in the yard, Raymond told 8 Defendant not to move or he would shoot; when Defendant saw Raymond again
9 from inside the house through the kitchen window just moments later, Raymond 10 pointed the gun at him, and Defendant testified that he thought Raymond was going 11 to shoot him. “The purpose of recognizing self-defense as a complete 12 justification . . . is the reasonable belief in the necessity for the use of deadly force 13 to repel an attack in order to save oneself or another from death or great bodily 14 harm.” State v. Coffin, 1999-NMSC-038, ¶ 12, 128 N.M. 192, 991 P.2d 477. The 15 State has not attempted to explain how the force used by Defendant amounts to 16 excessive force under the circumstances. And, as Defendant points out, because the 17 self-defense standard seeks to evaluate whether the use of force was necessary to 18 prevent a threatened injury, we cannot reject Defendant’s claim under the 19 circumstances presented solely because Raymond did not fire before Defendant shot 20 at him.

1 {11} Likewise, the fact that Defendant was inside his home does not render his 2 conduct objectively unreasonable. Unlike State v. Baroz, upon which the State relies, 3 there is no argument that Defendant provoked the situation, and Defendant was 4 clearly faced with the threat of a gun. See 2017-NMSC-030, ¶¶ 17-18, 404 P.3d 769
5 (holding that the objective element was not satisfied because the defendant 6 voluntarily entered and provoked the situation and did not claim that he saw any 7 weapons or knew that anyone at the residence carried guns). Defendant additionally 8 notes that under New Mexico law, he had no duty to retreat. See UJI 14-5190
9 NMRA.

10 {12} Finally, as for the State’s claim that Raymond was retreating at the time
11 Defendant fired, the evidence was conflicting on this point and we cannot resolve 12 the matter without invading the province of the jury to determine which witness’s 13 account is more credible.

14 {13} For these reasons, viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the 15 giving of the instruction as we must, we conclude there is “enough evidence to raise 16 a reasonable doubt in the mind of a juror about whether the defendant lawfully acted 17 in self-defense such that reasonable minds could differ,” and therefore, the 18 instruction should have been given. Baroz, 2017-NMSC-030, ¶ 15 (alterations, 19 omission, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted); Guerra, 2012-NMSC-20 014, ¶ 14 (“For a court to issue a self-defense instruction, there need be only enough

1 evidence to raise a reasonable doubt in the mind of a juror about whether the 2 defendant lawfully acted in self-defense. If any reasonable minds could differ, the 3 instruction should be given.” (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)). We 4 reverse Defendant’s convictions and remand for a new trial. In light of our holding, 5 it is not necessary to address the remaining issues raised by Defendant on appeal.

6 CONCLUSION

7 {14} We reverse Defendant’s convictions and remand for a new trial.
